

Lehigh University, Department of Sociology and Anthropology

Program Information

Program Name	Lehigh University, Department of Sociology and Anthropology
General Description / Special Programs	Both the anthropology and sociology curricula stress research methods used in social sciences, including participant observation, survey, and evaluation research training. They are geared to providing a background suitable for careers in nonacademic settings as well as a basis for further graduate work. Anthropology majors can pursue a general, four-field program of study or concentrate in either sociocultural or archaeological anthropology. The masters program in sociology focuses on Applied Social Research and is organized around core skills students need to pursue research careers in human or social service settings.
